E: adam.hiner@livepacha.com

Adam Hiner has been in the organic food and beverage industry since 2007, with a proven track record of successfully starting and building innovative companies. He started Southern California's first organic catering company, Eco Caters, followed by a farm to table restaurant, Local Habit, and built strong ties to the food scene in San Diego. In 2016, Adam launched the first-ever hard kombucha brand (Boochcraft) and created a whole new category of organic adult beverages with a sustainable approach. He grew that company to $15M in revenue before leaving the operations to start PACHA and remains on the board guiding strategic decisions. Additionally, Adam sits on the board of directors of The Ecology Center, a regenerative non-profit farm, which serves as the model for regenerative organic agriculture in Southern California.

Local Habit

Co-Founder

June 2011 - September 2013 (2 years 4 months)

My business partner and myself decided to bring our farm to table concept to the restaurant world and opened Local Habit. Focused on craft beer and organic dishes with a Cajun twist, Local Habit is a true San Diego favorite. We sold Local Habit in 2013 but it continues its success and its unique New Orleans inspired cuisine.

Local Habit is a vibrant restaurant that looks to New Orleans for inspiration with a seasonal Californian-Creole menu featuring West Coast takes on Louisiana classics.
