@danielsethlewis is asking our CFO to resign because @danielsethlewis colluded with certain board members to be paid a $750k bonus for his 60 days of "remotely working" from France, which was approved by a select group of our most esteemed Board members (will name names if need be) in contravention of the Companies own compensation committee guidelines which require any compensation payable to the CEO to be approved by the entire board as a whole. He told him "if you aren't going to process the wire then resign so I can have the next person process it". Total breach of fiduciary duty. If you are outraged by this, then let Daniel know here that he doesn't deserve $750k for torching over $300MM of shareholder value. \$BETR

By the way, these same people -- @danielsethlewis and the 2 senior esteemed board members who bullied the CFO to process his bonus -- were the same people out talking to bankers about a preferred equity issuance which would subordinate the common and dilute by over 20%. So glad Show more

Let me get this straight: the CFO leaks confidential information to Vishal, and Vishal reveals on X the CFO is the leaker? What kind of relationship is that?

No @danielsethlewis issued a demand to the CFO cc'ing everyone. The CFO and the companies General Counsel called me telling me that @danielsethlewis asked the CFO to resign, what should he do. And I told him and the companies general counsel, stay put, any dismissal of a C-level

Lowest rate/cost providers with direct MCP connectors that Muse can use to fulfill total transaction win. Particularly in financial services. Particularly benefits companies with high value product hindered by high CAC and lack of local human distribution. \$LMND \$BETR
